

“Domestic” reaches new heights in New York, at Rooftop Films

The film will be screened on 31st of July in Socrates Sculpture Park! Rooftop Film is a non-profit initiative and every summer, since 1997 it transforms the New York sky-scrapers roofs in open-air cinemas for over 15 000 spectators. “Rooftop Films aims to provide people a unique perspective — literally, with the view from the roof, and figuratively, with the daring filmmaking we show. We want to create an experience for filmmakers and audiences that is collaborative — it’s not a generic movie theater, where there’s no human interaction; it’s a community, a dialogue, a party.” We appreciate the invitation we received from the energetic founder and artistic director Mark Elijah Rosenberg and also thank him for the cordial description below: <http://rooftopfilms.com/2013/works/domestic/>
